From Caroline

Hi, Everyone,

Looks like we're in for another major heat wave this week so don't pack away your portable fans quite yet! No air-conditioning here in this old house - but we do have lots of hungry mosquitos - ooh, fun! I think if they're planning on coming inside they should at least be wearing masks, right?

It certainly looks like we'll all be continuing to wear masks for the foreseeable future. This "New Normal" feels like it's here to stay. Maybe you received the update from Sweet Adelines International letting us know that the decision has been made to cancel all Spring 2021 Regional Contests. Understandable - and not exactly surprising - considering how far in advance these events need to be planned. But still, it's disappointing news for those of us who look forward to our Bako weekends. But who knows? If a Covid vaccine (or some kind of "instant" testing) could be made available in the not-too-distant future, maybe we'll have a chance to gather somewhere outside and safely sing a tag or two together? It's just a matter of time so I definitely live in hope!

In the meantime, happily, we have our Monday night Zoom sessions to keep us connected - YAY! Last Monday's discussion was really fun! Thanks to everyone who logged in and shared their favorite book, TV and movie recommendations. Wow! So many fabulous suggestions! And I got a sense that most of you had even more on your lists so how about we keep that conversation going tonight?

If you weren't able to join us last week, pop in and say hello - it's always great to see (and/or hear) you!
That's it for now!
