From Caroline

Hi, Everyone!

I realize I write this every week, but I hope you're all doing well - especially now that the dreaded Covid seems to be running amok again. I also hope that you all manage to have a good Thanksgiving this week in spite of it all. Peter bought the smallest turkey we've ever had as our plan is to stay home with Lucy dog and maybe binge-watch the highly anticipated new season of The Crown.

(Okay, full disclosure, we actually watched the first two episodes last night and after I remarked that a couple of parts seemed sort of familiar we realized we had been re-watching the previous season's opening episodes!! Arghh!)

Along with other Thanksgiving traditions, I generally re-post - on Instagram - our classic photo of Peter in the kitchen preparing the turkey. In case you're not an Instagram nut here it is for your amusement (no explanation needed :-):

If you're ready and willing to join us on Zoom tonight we'll be having a fun quiz (thanks, Rachel) PLUS a chance to sing along with one of our favorite Holiday songs, Christmas in Killarney. I realize not everyone is feeling festive this year...but I'm hearing that some of you still DO want to sing. So, my plan is for us to brush up on our Seasonal Favorites and then celebrate together with a virtual party/singalong for our last Zoom session of the year (Dec 21). Check out the website sheet music/learning tracks and let me know (by email) what your top three Holiday songs from our list!

That's it from me - see you tonight!

What's the best song to sing while you are preparing your Thanksgiving Turkey this week?

"All About That Baste!" ;-)
